DESCRIPTION

Mathew was born into low class family. Dad worked for Ares R&D and was a brilliant inventor, atleast in the eyes of his young son, but lost rights for his inventions to his employer. One morning when Mathew was nine his dad was excited about a new breakthrough he had made and was eager to get it published. He called to his long term colleague Dylar Trel and told about the breakthrough and started driving to work. He didn't get there though because gang of troll extremists intercepted his car en route to work and shot it to pieces. Later news outlets told how a member of a Humanis Policlub extremist wing was killed by a troll gang in racism related crime. Mathew didn't really know anything about Humanis Policlub at the time so he believed that. Mathew's mom started acting very strangely after the incident like she was constantly afraid of something and looking over her shoulder and about a week later she just disappeared. Social service official figured out she just couldn't handle raising a child alone and just abandoned Mathew. That didn't really convince Mathew and was sure mom wouldn't have just done that. Mathew was put into foster home but he didn't really fit in. He got into fights and noticed he wasn't very good at it but as he grew a bit older and got into more fights he noticed if he kept focusing and thinking over what he was doing he was much more precise. Later when Mathew learned more about being awakened he realized those were the times when his magical talents began to emerge.

In his teens Mathew escaped from his foster parents and sought his way into Humanis affliated group so he could learn more about what his father believed. He was in Humanis affliated groups for some years and learned more about his nature, new skills and Humanis philosophies. Those philosophies seemed to differ much from that he remembered his father to have been so he began to question the official truth. He started asking around and didn't find any hint that his father would have ever been a member. Even those who had been named in news as his collaborators didn't know anything about him. So he left Humanis and started to look for answers elsewhere. Humanis had taught Andrew how fight so he knew to defend himself.

Andrew asked around about his father and mother but had hard time finding anything about them. Any clues he found out about them quickly ran dry and people who knew anything seemed reluctant to talk about them. Over the years he managed to track down the group who was named to be responsible for his father's murder. He planned an elaborate revenge on them and bombed them one by one until he managed to get access to their main server. From their files he found out they weren't really racist gang member but in reality mercenaries working to those who paid for their services. So Mathew's father wasn't really victim of a hate crime, he was assasinated. Mathew did his best to find out who had hired the mercenaries to do the work but only leads he could find were a dead dummy corporation. Still it seemed that he maneged to stirr up something because someone started to try to get him killed. He survived for some time with his smarts and being careful but after a while he made a mistake running after some shooter carrying an illegal weapon and Knight Errant picked him up. He was taken in prosessed and thrown in brick. He was kept there for days but during his time there he started getting to know and bond with one of the Knight Errent recruits over there. Recruits name was Kane Polan. After enough time had passed and Spark still haven't been moved to more permanent holding facility Kane took iniative and started asking why he was there from his supervisors but they couldn't find any record of any offense Spark had committed or any other evidence so they had to let him go. Afterwards Spark received an untraceable e-mail from someone who referred himself as "Shadow" telling he had deleted the data and was willing to cover Spark so he could continue his work but he should be more careful and gather some allies and resources before "doing something as stupid as that" but theone thing that burned into his memory most was "your mother is proud of you". So I started following his advice with newly fueled vigor and a lesson learned in value of right help. Since then Shadow has kept my records clean but all attemps to find out more about him have failed.

I relocated to new part of town and started gathering friends. Kept in trouch regularly with Kane and got to know people in new places, hopefully the right ones. I figured supplies are needed so got myself close to Ares warehouse manager John Parker and we got along great. Also got in touch Dylan Mitch who seemed to have lots of intel and he was also interested in that I had experienced and witnessed so we traded stories and he helped me to some new leads but unluckily those didn't really span out either. Started to do some charity to some addict troll "Smorgh" so I might sleep little safer but still didn't feel safe sleeping in one place too long. Finally decided to get myself a mobile home so I wouldn't have to have any permanent address and would be atleast a bit harder to track.

And now someone hinted that mafia might have some intel on my mother or my father's killer. It's a long shot but it seems they are recruiting so atleast it's a chance to find new allies and I can't leave any clue unchecked...
